

N.Y. Theatrical Letter

Hazel Dawn and Wilmuth Merkyl in "The Debutante"

New York, Dec. 12.—Musical comedy is not dead. Some producers had begun to think so, likewise a number of theatergoers. But Victor Herbert comes galloping along with a tank of oxygen. Hazel Dawn pumps it into the patient, and artificial respiration set in forthwith.